The impact of sitting on children's health: A movement schools can't ignore

Professor Jo Salmon

Professor Jo Salmon will provide the latest evidence of the impact of prolonged sitting on children's health, and how even small increases in movement over the long term can benefit health. She will present the outcomes of a large intervention trial as well as novel pilot studies that have tested the impact of changes to primary and secondary school environments as well as teaching practices on children's sitting and physical activity.

Alfred Deakin Professor Jo Salmon is Co-Director of the Institute for Physical Activity and Nutrition, Deakin University. She holds a National Health & Medical Research Council Principal Research Fellowship, and is President of the International Society for Behavioural Nutrition and Physical Activity.
